“Life Without Prison”

Last night I had a dream of my life without prison;

It was a plethora of boundless possibilities;

I was a scholar of medicines specializing in human resources;

I was an emergency medic enrolled in the armed forces;

I was a better role model for my generation;

It was 2008 and I was present at President Obama’s historical inauguration;

I was a father figure to my nieces;

I put myself in a positive environment surrounded by good people and watched as my chance of success increased immensely;

I was employee of the year twice and executive of the month once;

I was a good friend;

I was an honest man;

I had many hard times;

But was pretty sure it made me a better man;

I was African-American, Asian, Hispanic, and Caucasian;

I was color blind;

I was the embodiment of love and it was amazing;

Last night, I had a dream of my life without prison;

It was a plethora of good deeds and unboundless of limits!
