

Louis Powell, B-59864
WordsUncaged Class Submission

“Consciousness”

Consciousness is indefinable, it's unknowable and knowable. It is the irrefutability of truth. It is continuity and the material reality of life's phenomena. It is the abstract and concrete knowledge in its unconnected and connected process. Contradiction, contradiction, cause and effect. The unresolvable and the resolvable discourse. The unrealizable and realizable struggle in its historical process. The quest for the infinity of time and space. The irreversible struggle of the past and the spontaneous burst of consciousness.